ROOSEVELT WINS THIRD TERM BY CAPTURING 37 STATES WITH ELECTORAL VOTE OF 433; LOST 7

Willkie Captured a Tremendous Protest Vote Against the Administration — Willkie At Times Held Lead But Then Drifted Behind

By William K. Hutchinson
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—(INS)—President Franklin D. Roosevelt shattered 150 years of American tradition today as he won a third successive term in the White House by an astounding victory over Wendell Willkie, his Republican rival.

The President captured 37 states, with an electoral vote of 433, lost seven and had a chance to win four more, with an electoral vote of 53.

Willkie woke today, after refusing to concede defeat last night, to find he was assured of taking only seven states with an electoral vote of 45. He held leads at times but drifted behind early today in four more states—New Jersey, Indiana, Michigan and North Dakota with an electoral vote of 53—and may lose all of them.

The President won magnificently but Willkie captured a tremendous protest vote against the administration. In addition, the President ran far ahead of local tickets in many states, in which the Republicans elected Governors and United States Senators.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—(INS)—President Franklin D. Roosevelt today was entrusted with a third term in the White House after shattering all American traditions by a landslide victory over Wendell Willkie, his Republican opponent.

The President remained "the champ" by sweeping at least 39 states for an electoral vote of 451 when he needed but 266.

Willkie carried the following states—Colorado, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Nebraska, South Dakota and Vermont.

Willkie was ahead in only nine states, with an Electoral count of 80 votes, at an early hour, with possibilities that final tabulations might change this total to some slight degree.

Mr. Roosevelt won the greatest "vote of confidence" ever given an American by his countrymen in over 150 years of our democracy. He responded by calling on the country to present a "united front" against the menace of the world's dictators.

Willkie, running behind from the first tabulation in New England to the last on the Pacific Coast, went to bed without congratulating Mr. Roosevelt and without conceding defeat. Taking a cue from him, other Republican chieftains failed to concede him victory.

ONLY FOUR DAYS LEFT IN HIGHEST VOTE PERIOD

Count of Ballots In Junior Popularity Election To Be Made Tonight

STILL TIME TO ENTER

With only four remaining days of the highest vote period in the "Junior Popularity Election," all contestants are looking toward the midweek Wednesday evening count at eight o'clock tonight. This count may be the means of some new contestants gaining the first position on the Honor Roll to be published in the Thursday issue of the Courier.

Business houses participating in the contest report a great increase in the demand for the "Junior Popularity Vote" Coupons. Friends, relatives and neighbors are always asking for their coupons when making purchases in the participating stores.

Interest generally has increased and the contest to determine the most popular Junior in the Bristol area is well under way. There is still plenty of time for any parent to enter their youngster and participate in the many cash awards and cash commissions at the end of the contest. A number of people are not now regular subscribers to the Courier and there is a great field just waiting for the contestants to call and pick up a yearly or half-yearly subscription.

Contestants are urged to report every possible subscription and coupon for the Wednesday count. The bonus votes on subscriptions and coupons are the final to be awarded during the first period of the Election. It is possible to make many more credits on the Wednesday count than any other, therefore it is up to every contestant to make the most of their time between now and eight o'clock this evening.

G.O.P. INCREASES LEAD IN STATE SENATE

Incomplete Returns Show That At Least 5 Seats Are Gained

RETURN NOT COMPLETE

By Raymond Wilcox
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
HARRISBURG, Nov. 6.—(INS)—The Democratic party today apparently captured the State House of Representatives, sweeping aside in the Roosevelt landslide the 50-seat majority the Republicans amassed in 1938. In the Senate, however, the Republicans increased their lead.

On the basis of incomplete reports from all the 208 House districts in the State, the Democrats captured 28 additional seats. If they retain the 79 seats they already hold the Democrats will have a few more than a majority in the 1941 Legislature, which convenes next January.

In the Senate the Democratic trend was reversed, the G. O. P. increasing its 26 to 24 lead of the present Legislature by at least five seats, with returns not Continued on Page Three

DIRECTORS APPROVE PLAN FOR ADULTS' EVENING COURSE

Grant Use of Bristol High School Building For 10 Weeks' Course

"FATHERS" SPONSORING

Board Informed That Vocational Class In Acetylene Welding Is Underway

Bristol borough school directors, last evening, approved a plan to conduct adult night classes in Bristol high school. The Fathers Association is the sponsoring organization, representatives of that organization visiting the directors in monthly session last evening, and securing permission to use the high school building one night a week.

It is planned to teach public speaking, bridge, dancing, typing, etc., for a period of 10 weeks. It is the plan to have sessions on one of the nights that the blue-print reading classes are held so that no extra evenings will be required for use of the building.

David Neill, president of the Fathers' Association, and Thomas Coles, also a member, presented the plan to the board last evening. The students will be charged tuition according to the number of courses taken.

Doron Green presided at the short session.

It was announced that in addition to wood-form making, blue-print reading classes, etc., now conducted under the vocational guidance work in the school buildings, that a night class in acetylene welding is also underway.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

After The Election

Washington, Nov. 5.

THIS column is being written before the results of the election can be known, but by the time it is printed either Mr. Roosevelt will have been re-elected or Mr. Willkie elected President of the United States, and one of the most important campaigns in American history will be a thing of the past.

THOUGH it is conceded the verdict, as measured in electoral votes, may be overwhelmingly for the successful candidate, so hidden are the popular tides and so many the factors which sway the voters that literally no one is certain now who that will be. Despite their professed confidence, neither Mr. Roosevelt nor Mr. Willkie will know the answer before the votes are counted. Nor will anyone else.

—o—

THAT being the case, this seems the appropriate moment to set down certain beliefs and feelings about the after effect of the election upon the American people. The basic conviction which it is desired here to express is that, bitter as has been this campaign and strong as are the emotions that have been aroused, there is nothing to prevent real national unity once the result is definitely known. Because of the heat engendered by a seemingly close contest and because of the extravagant statements that have been made on both sides, there are those who fear we will emerge from this campaign a divided and embittered people.

—o—

THIS fear I believe to be groundless. It is groundless for several perfectly clear reasons. One is that with the threat of war compelling a great national defense effort, once the election is over the

DRAFT BOARD TO CALL 2

Twelve young men from the area covered by Bristol Draft Board No. 1, have enlisted in the branches of the U. S. armed forces during the past few days, nine enrolling through the local office, and three through the war department elsewhere.

According to this dozen of men, they desire to serve their year of training, so they might then feel free to follow business or secure positions without interruption.

The 12 will be called for examination within a few days, according to members of the board located in Bristol post office building. They are all, according to draft board members, within the draft age group.

Word has been received at the headquarters of the selective service board here to secure for the November 25th call two of those who registered on October 16th. There are to be the same number called from each district in Bucks County for the enrollment of November 25th. This first contingent, made up of men from all over the United States, will form the 30,000 summoned for training to start on that date.

In preparation for the first two to be called and other small groups to be summoned subsequently, the local board sent out yesterday 30 or 40 questionnaires. These are to be returned within five days, and from the group the two will possibly be summoned.

Work at the draft office in the post office building is proceeding smoothly, under guidance of a competent staff.

See Chair Burning On Porch of Tullytown Home

Fire last night slightly damaged the porch of the residence of William Fabian, Bristol Pike, near the high bridge at Tullytown.

A chair had caught fire in the house earlier during the evening and after it was thought that the flames had been extinguished, the chair was left outside on a porch. It is believed that the wind fanned flames and the chair started burning again.

Louis Paone, 312 Dorrance street, Bristol, was driving three friends back to Fort Dix when the quartette saw the flames. The four aroused Mr. Fabian who had retired and aided him in extinguishing the fire.

Some of the boards on the porch were burned. Paone was accompanied by Privates Ernest Pinelli, John Long and Michael Decola.

RAVAGING GREECE

Newspaper readers—and especially radio listeners—should guard against premature assumptions regarding the Italian invasion of Greece. This extension of the Axis offensive to still another country, memories of the Greek struggle for independence in which Lord Byron lost his life, and the bombing of Athens, treasure-house of ancient world monuments, all tend to make one look at the present crisis as an isolated event. In all probability, it is but part of a comprehensive strategy aimed at Great Britain.

There are signs of intensified movement all along the line. Germany is increasing the pressure on England from the air and from under the sea. Hitler may even be contemplating a surprise invasion. In Egypt, Italy is moving again toward the Suez Canal. After long delay Spain seems about ready to co-operate in a flank attack on Gibraltar.

Bulgaria, whose protestations of neutrality in the Italian-Greek war cannot be relied on, may soon be the scene of a Nazi thrust toward the Dardanelles. And from the attitude of Russia, it is suspected that Hitler and Mussolini had assurances of hands-off in the Greek venture. Uncertain about aid from Moscow, Turkey is unwilling to rush aid to Greece, especially since Hitler has threatened to pounce if she does.

The Italian invasion of Greece, therefore, may serve both as a diversion of interest from other spheres where the Axis may strike and as a preparation for further offensives in the Mediterranean sector. At all events, it injects a new and ominous note into the European conflict, and helps substantiate guesses that the crucial battles of the winter will be fought in and around that body of water which the Italians bombastically call "Our Sea."

MEXICO TRUE TO FORM

Every turn of the wheel makes it apparent that this country leans on a broken reed when it relies on Mexico to be of any assistance in opposing the totalitarians.

There was rejoicing in Washington when it was announced that Mexico had placed an embargo on the shipment to Japan of mercury, oil, flour, scrap iron and a few other materials directly or indirectly essential for Tokyo to carry on her long-drawn contest with China.

But now comes the announcement that the short-lived embargo has been lifted. The Mexican authority breaking the news says it is given out with some misgivings because it is feared the change of policy will be "misunderstood" in the United States. He is anxious for Americans to know that Mexico is just as much in favor of "solidarity" with this country as before. But the "economic position" of Mexico is such that the stuff must be shipped at this time.

So the net result is a fuller realization that the Mexican government is too feeble, in every sense of the word, for this nation to place any reliance upon her positive or negative aid. The week-kneed position taken by the Roosevelt administration when Mexico confiscated American oil properties has, of course, contributed to the lack of respect now being shown by Mexico.

The Mexican is an animal that cannot understand an argument unless it is backed by force.

COMMUNICATION

Editor Courier:

So many Christians are asking the questions: "Where is God?" "Why doesn't He stop this cruel war which is being fought abroad and which in time may engulf the United States?" I am only a layman and while I don't presume to know as much as the preachers, yet in the everyday trend of affairs, I can see God's hand using a restraining force here, building up a great defensive there, and enlarging and unfolding His plans against that day when barbarism, inhumanity and brutality shall be overthrown, and the United States and Great Britain shall be called upon to build a new world founded upon democratic principles and with God's love and guidance as it abiding asset. Perhaps a statement of my views might give hope and encouragement to despairing hearts.

We often hear Christians say in these days of stress and excitement: "Why doesn't God answer the prayers of His followers and overthrow Hitler, thus bringing this cruel war to a close?" I think the reason why the question is asked is because many Christians have forgotten that God's ways are not our ways, that He abideth His time, and often uses natural and human means and agencies to achieve His end.

When Hitler had conquered the smaller nations and unexpectedly France surrendered, he was at the zenith of his power. England was crippled and dismayed over the evacuation of Dunkirk. Had Hitler struck then, nothing could have stopped him in his contemplated invasion of Great Britain and if he had done so, no one can tell what the condition of the world would have been today. Flushed with victory and eager to carry out his plans for the conquest of the world, victory was seemingly within his grasp. It was a most fateful time in the world's history.

But Hitler hesitated and two months went by. During the interim Great Britain recovered her morale and began to set up a system of national defense. When at last Hitler was ready to strike he found a restored nation prepared and ready to fight. His plans for invasion were thwarted and the enemy air force is now carrying the fight into Berlin itself.

Why did Hitler hesitate to attack Great Britain when everything pointed to a quick and decisive victory? Why did he hold back until Great Britain was able to fortify itself and block his plans?

Christian people who complain because God doesn't answer prayer should pause for a moment and ask themselves this question: "Is there any power on this earth that could have stopped Hitler at that time when he was eager to move forward and accomplish new conquests and achievements?" No! No! No! There is but one answer to the question. An omnipotent and unseen hand stood in his pathway. It held him at bay until Great Britain had recovered and was ready to fight. This unseen hand saved Great Britain from destruction, placed Hitler in a position where he is demoralized and bewildered, and above all shows clearly and forcibly that God still shapes the destinies of nations and does not forsake His people in their hour of greatest trial.

Since the time when God placed a restraining hand upon Hitler, the totalitarian leaders, Hitler and Mussolini, have been floundering around with definite objectives in view. Conference after conference have been held without any visible results. Mussolini's campaign in Egypt has bogged down, and his efforts to cover over the facts by his attack on Greece are not meeting with the success anticipated. Hitler is afraid to strike in the Balkans through fear of Russian interference. As time passes Great Britain is growing in military power. As a last resource the three totalitarian governments, Germany, Italy and Japan, have formed a co-operative pact, but the results have been disappointing to them. Everything that Hitler or Mussolini have done since that moment when God laid his restraining hand upon Hitler and prevented the invasion of Great Britain, has been futile.

God's hand can still be seen in the confusion which has engulfed Hitler and Mussolini. If Democracy is to be saved and preserved then all the "isms" antagonistic thereto must be destroyed. It would be futile to destroy Germany and permit Italy and Japan to pursue their present course without opposition. It would be equally futile to place a restraining hand upon Italy and Japan, and still allow Germany to function unmolested.

God understands this better than we. If by one blow He can destroy all three nations then the way will be open for the United States and Great Britain to build up an all-powerful world democracy. I do not presume to read God's thoughts but looking at the situation from a human standpoint, I can see an influence at work which is bringing the totalitarian nations closer and closer together, thus preparing the way for the final blow that will destroy all three nations and make possible the building of a new world where Christ shall rule.

Why, then, as Christians, should we be discouraged? Although we have been slow to discover it, God's hand is still at the helm and although for a time the journey may be perilous and many obstacles may have to be overcome, still knowing that God is with His people, we should struggle on, believing that the time is coming, perhaps sooner than we expect, when our enemies having been destroyed, we shall reach a safe harbor.

Should we not hope as well as pray that when the great opportunity comes and God places upon us the responsibility to build a new world, we shall be ready and qualified? Let us stop complaining and remember that God's ways are not our ways, that He abideth His time, that He works in a mysterious way His wonders to perform, and above all let us try to be prepared and steady when He calls upon us to come

"TRIAL WITHOUT JURY"

By JAMES RONALD

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

"Do you think anyone in the world would put up with you if it weren't for your money?" demanded Dorothy suddenly. "You make no effort to be pleasant. You delight in picking holes in everyone. Why, you wouldn't dare have the way you do if you weren't rich. There isn't a hotel or boarding-house in the country where you'd be welcome for a single day if you couldn't pay well enough to make it worth while to put up with your vile temper. Uncle Simon has no money but we all love him. There's nothing mercenary about our love. When he comes to visit us he comes empty-handed but we're all glad to see him. We'd be glad to see you if you'd only be half-human, but you won't be, because money has poisoned you until you think you can afford to look down on everyone."

"You express yourself less vehemently than your sister," purred Miss Osborne. "But I see you hold the same view. And you, Master Michael, have you no desire to give your aged and despoised aunt what—I believe—domestic servants and people of that class call 'a piece of your mind'?"

"Oh, what's the use?" muttered Michael. "Ann's said it all—well, all but this: If you'd earned the money you'd have a perfect right to do what you liked with it, and we couldn't grumble. But you didn't earn it. You inherited it from a member of the family and you've no right to do anything with it when you die except pass it on to another member of the family. If Grandfather had wanted it left to charity he'd have left it to charity himself. Don't think I care what you do with it. I don't want it. We'll probably be happier without it; I can't see that it's made you happy. If you'd spent it all and had a good time, I'd say good luck to you. If you gave it away during your lifetime and made the lives of some poor folks more bearable, I'd say, 'Well!' But to hoard it like a miser all your life and then toss it to charities simply to spite Dad—well, that's not my idea of fair play."

Hannah stamped into the room, whispered in her mistress's ear, glared at Miss Osborne, and stamped out. Little Peter was quivering in his chair as though he had something on his mind. The outraged Octavia turned a caustic glance on him.

"You, too. Well, what is it? I may as well hear what the twelve-year-old thinks of me."

Peter looked at his mother.

"Please," he said, "may I go out to play?"

Edith's gaze, stricken and sorrowful, travelled round the table, resting in turn on the faces of each of her children.

"You may all leave the room," she said at last.

"It is out of the question for me to remain under your roof after this insulting scene," said Miss Osborne with tremendous dignity. "If you will instruct Mimms to repack my bags and procure a vehicle to convey them to the station, I shall leave at once."

"I don't think Miss Mimms has unpacked," replied Edith with all the calmness she could muster. "She felt faint at lunch and Hannah made her lie down. I understand she's asleep. There is no train until four o'clock, so perhaps until then—"

"I can wait at the station."

"On the platform? The waiting-room's always locked in the middle of the day, you know. Let us be reasonable, Octavia. The scene at lunch was ghastly. I shall never forgive myself for failing to stop it as soon as it started. I am not apologizing for my children; you practically forced them to express themselves the way they did; but I do blame myself. Your train does not go for two hours. Surely we can submerge our differences for that short period?"

"Very well. I shall wait in the living room."

Like a stark and awful spectre Octavia Osborne stalked out of the room. In silence Edith watched her go, then she reeled and clutched at a chair for support. The room seemed to revolve dizzily around. I

"She can sit there alone till she rots for all I care."

"Ah, dear, we've got to be polite."

"Polite? Bah!"

"For me, Ann."

"Oh, all right."

Ann went into the living room and dropped into a chair facing her aunt. Miss Osborne was sitting very straight, her back arched, her head held high, her hands folded on her lap. Her face was sharp and hard, her blue eyes as icy and pointed as ever. The heightened color of her thin cheeks was the only sign of emotion she displayed.

"I presume your mother sent you

"You are hardly very lively company, niece," observed Miss Osborne.

mustn't faint. . . she thought, clinging desperately to the chair. . . I mustn't faint.

"Mother!" It was Ann's voice, tense and anxious.

Edith managed to raise her head and force a smile.

"I'm all right, child. For a moment I felt giddy but I'm better now. Don't look so worried, dear, it's nothing."

"You'd better come and lie down. I'm sorry about that horrid scene. Mother, but I couldn't help it. She was so cruel to Daddy. Oh, I'd like to kill her!"

"So would I!"—the words shuddered out of Edith's lips—"Heaven forgive me, so would I! To sit there and watch poor Stephen's face while she ranted on and on—What am I saying? Ann! We mustn't talk like this."

"You're upset, Mother. Do come and lie down."

"No, my dear, I'm perfectly all right. Besides, I must find your father."

On her way out to the garden through the French windows, Edith paused and looked back anxiously at her grim, scowling daughter.

"Ann . . . your aunt's in the living room. She can't let her sit there alone. After all, she's going at four and we shall probably never see her again."

to keep me company. How very thoughtful of her!"

You are my own flesh-and-blood, thought Ann; yet how I abhor you! I despise you so much that my eyes are burning in my head. I often wondered what it was like to "see red." Now I know. Every bit of me is tense with hatred of you.

In a silence so heavy that it seemed to close in on them like an encircling wall, they glared at each other. . . . Acid blue eyes. Smouldering dark eyes. Bitter age. Contemptuous youth. . . . The room was like a sky black with clouds, thunderous, stifling, that at any moment might be ripped jaggedly by flashes of lightning.

"You are hardly very lively company, niece," said Miss Osborne dryly.

Ann stifled the desire to laugh. If she once started she would go on laughing wildly, hysterically, until the end of time.

"I have no doubt you would rather be reading a book."

"Much rather," retorted Ann. "I am not surprised. Pray read, if you are so inclined."

"Very well, I shall."

"Do."

trend of the people will be toward full support of the man they have chosen President for the next four years. National unity behind him on all matters of defense and foreign policy is clearly essential. Clearly, it is something we cannot afford not to have. Clearly, public sentiment will be heavily against those who withhold support on these things. The President-elect is not only entitled to such support from those who opposed him but it would be discreditable and unpatriotic not to provide it.

It was, of course, an unfortunate thing that the campaign had to come in the midst of our defense effort. Unquestionably, it has been slowed down by the intensity of the fight. Politics and politicians have prevented some things that should have been done from being done and have caused some things to be done that should not have been done. But, once the election has been determined, there is slight excuse for not going ahead full steam, and none for not standing firmly behind the man whom the voters have made responsible.

The overwhelming fact is that, bitter as was the campaign and foul as were some of the blows struck, on the question of foreign policy and defense, there was no real difference between the candidates. They both stood against the totalitarian forms of government and opposed the dictators. They both were for all possible aid to Great Britain short of war. They both were for total defense. Hence, whoever is elected, there will be no change in our foreign policy; none in our preparations to become strong; none in our desire to avert war.

THERE was in the campaign no question about changing these policies. There was the question of who best could carry them out, and there was the question of the third term. But once the voters have decided these questions, there seems nothing to prevent the nation from uniting behind the victor in all matters pertaining to defense and foreign affairs. If Mr. Roosevelt wins, Mr. Willkie's supporters cannot afford to carry their bitterness forward. If Mr. Willkie—as he would—can erase all trace of resentment and offer wholehearted co-operation, his followers can hardly afford not to co-operate too.

AND if Mr. Willkie should be elected, the Roosevelt followers cannot afford to let their disappointment cause them to pull back on the President-elect, nor their resentment take the form of crippling criticism. Mr. Roosevelt would countenance no such attitude toward his successful opponent. His admirers could hardly fail to follow his example. Whatever the outcome, in facing the problems forced on us by the war, this nation will be solidly behind the man it elects as its head today. And any foreign dictator who thinks otherwise is making a very bad guess indeed.

Roosevelt Wins Third Term By Capturing 37 States With Electoral Vote of 433; Lost 7

silence, McNary congratulated both the President and the Vice-President-elect, Henry A. Wallace, of Iowa. McNary telegraphed both congratulations but told the country that the Republicans would maintain in Congress a "worthy and vigilant opposition." He added that the great race run by Willkie this year ensured the Republicans victory in 1944.

Willkie proved belligerent to the end. His last words to faithful admirers, before he went to bed, were: "Don't be afraid. Never quit."

The President meanwhile swept a Democratic Congress along into power. His tremendous pluralities in the industrial East helped Democrats to capture seats in the House. He made it certain that he will have a friendly House and Senate at least for the next two years.

In many states, however, the President ran far ahead of his ticket. In some, the Republicans either retained or captured governorships and senatorships although he won the electoral vote.

Willkie ran best in rural areas and the farm belt of the midwest. Two exceptions were New Jersey and Michigan, in which Willkie ran ahead of Roosevelt throughout the night. There were possibilities, however, that the President would finally carry New Jersey despite Willkie's early lead.

Veteran observers saw the voters of these two states as casting protest ballots against the local Democratic machine rather than against the President. In New Jersey, where the Republicans seem certain to win the Governorship and a Senatorship even if Roosevelt gets the Electoral vote, the outcome was regarded as a protest vote against the machine of Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City. In Michigan, the outcome was viewed as a protest against the machine of M. D. Van Wagoner, Democratic boss and the party's candidate for Governor.

MOOSE WAIVE DUES FOR MEMBERS WHO ENLIST OR ARE CONSCRIPTED

MOOSEHEART, Ill., Oct. 14.—The Loyal Order of Moose, international fraternal organization with nearly 1,700 lodges and a half million members, has waived dues of all its members who enlist or are conscripted for military service. Each Moose member called will remain in good standing without paying dues throughout his period of active service.

This action has been taken by the Moose supreme council to line up the entire organization 100 per cent in support of the National Defense program. Supreme Secretary Malcolm R. Giles states that members in active military service will be eligible to enjoy all the social and fraternal benefits of the Moose.

Children of Moose members, who might die while engaged in active military service, will be given a home, a high school education and training in a trade at Mooseheart, the "child city" located near Aurora, Ill., if they otherwise qualify and are left dependent.

In addition to this new action, the Loyal Order of Moose is at present conducting a patriotic campaign in all lodges in the United States. It is the purpose of the campaign to place a new American flag in the home of each member and to present each child at Mooseheart with a flag, a Constitution of the United States and a booklet telling how to display and care for the flag properly.

Recent decisions of the Moose, however, are international as well as national in scope. The supreme council, headed by U. S. Senator James J. Davis, director general of the Moose, will provide a home at Mooseheart for 50 evacuated children of Moose members in Great Britain. Fifty children will be taken immediately and more will find a home at Mooseheart as facilities become available. This in no way affects the 200 other Moose children from Great Britain who are to be cared for in homes of Canadian members. Sufficient funds have been voted to cover the cost of transporting these children from the port of arrival to homes in Canada and to Mooseheart.

House for the third time in 84 years and posed for Republican Governor Arthur H. James a difficult problem for the remaining two years of his administration.

The greatest Democratic House gain was in Philadelphia, where 11 seats were picked up. Other gains were: Allegheny 2, Adams 1, Clarion 1, Columbia 1, Cumberland 1, Delaware 1, Lehigh 2, Luzerne 2, Northampton 1, Northumberland 1, York 2.

Speaker of the House Ellwood J. Turner, Delaware, was returned to the House, but with the Chamber in Democratic hands he will be supplanted, perhaps by Rep. Leo A. Achterman, Scranton, acting Democratic floor leader, who was also re-elected.

Republican gains in the Senate were garnered in the 15th, 29th, 33rd, 41st and 49th Districts.

Sen. C. Hale Sipe, Democrat, of the Butler-Armstrong district, was defeated by Jacob W. Carr, (R), Butler. Minority leader Harry Shapiro, Philadelphia, was re-elected, as were Anthony J. DiSilvestro, (D), Philadelphia; H. Jerome Jaspas, (D), Philadelphia; Israel Stiefel, (D), Philadelphia; Weldon B. Heyburn, (R), Concordville; Frank W. Ruth, (D), Bernville; George B. Put Best Food Forward; Try Holiday Ham

Low Temperature and Dry Heat Most Important Factors in Roasting Meat

Thanksgiving Day dinner is always a case of putting your best food forward.

Baked ham, as American as this holiday itself, is an excellent example of so doing, says Iuez S. Willson, home economist, as she emphasizes low temperature and dry heat as the most important factors to insure perfection in roasting.

Selecting the Meat
You may buy either a whole ham or a half ham, whichever best suits your needs. In either case, be sure that it's larger than you need for the one meal—ham is such excellent material for resourceful follow-ups.

If the ham has the skin on, this may be taken off at the market, or it can be removed just before the end of the baking period.

Bake Ham Slowly
A ham is baked on a rack in an uncovered pan with its fat side up. No basting is necessary during cooking because, with the fat side up, the meat is basted automatically.

If you have a meat thermometer insert it so that the bulb is in the center of the thickest muscle, not touching the bone or fat.

Roast the meat in a slow oven, 300 degrees F., until the thermometer registers 170 degrees F. While many factors affect the length of time it will take for the ham to reach doneness, the average time is about 25 minutes per pound.

While ham is deliciously flavorful just as it comes from the oven, sometimes for variety, to complement the taste or just to be festive, we glaze the ham shortly before it's done.

Particularly appropriate for Thanksgiving is this Cranberry Almond Glaze for baked ham.

Cranberry Almond Glaze
½ cup light brown sugar
2 cups cranberries
½ cup chopped almonds
1 cup water
1 cup sugar
Cloves

One-half hour before the ham is done, remove the rind, if present, and score the fat diagonally. Insert cloves into the fat at regular intervals.

sprinkle with brown sugar, return to the oven for a few minutes. Cook cranberries with water until tender, then add the sugar and almonds. When the brown sugar has melted on the ham, baste with the cranberry sauce and return to the oven to finish cooking.

Other Garnishes for Ham

There are many other ways to garnish a ham. It may be scored, stuck with cloves, and Queen Anne cherries may be placed in each of the diamonds for design. They should be fastened with toothpicks. A cluster of apricots may be arranged on the ham and spiced fruits may be placed about it heated during the last few minutes of cooking.

In fact, there are so many ways to serve a ham that each time it can have a new and attractive "dress."

MODERN MILL GIVES VARIETY OF FLOURS TO AVERAGE HOMES

By Miss Edna Stephany
(Home Economics Representative)

Every home once had its own flour mill. But that was back when civilization was young, and a flour mill was simply two flat stones that a woman could rub together to crack the grain. Homemakers today take this staple grocery pretty much for granted. But they do know that modern milling gives them a variety of different flour products, and they must decide which flour is best for yeast breads, for quick breads, for cake, and for pastry.

Wheat flour is used most widely because it makes large, light loaves of bread. The wheat contains two special proteins and when mixed with liquid they form a sticky, elastic mass known as gluten.

Any child who has made paste from flour and water is familiar with this gluten. It is sticky enough to hold pictures down in a scrap book; and it will stretch out in long, rubbery strings. If it was possible to pump gas into every cell of the flour paste, the gluten would stretch and hold the gas just as it does when yeast forms carbon dioxide in making bread.

In fact, good quality gluten is very elastic. Flour that contains this high quality gluten is called "strong" flour. It is made from the hard wheat types and is the baker's first choice for making yeast bread.

When you make fine cakes and pastries, you're interested in a tender texture—not in strong gluten. In fact, too much gluten makes the cake tough and rubbery. So, for cakes and pastry, the home baker uses a "weak" flour that comes from soft wheat.

Many homemakers prefer to buy just one kind of flour that will be suitable for anything they bake—bread, muffins, biscuits, or cake. For them there is an "all purpose" or "family" flour, a blend of hard and soft wheat, that has enough gluten to make good yeast bread and will also produce fairly tender cakes and quick breads.

Most of the flour on the market is the plain white kind—made from the inner part of the wheat grain, with the germ and most of the bran removed. But some flour is also made from the entire grain, and sold as whole-wheat flour, graham flour, or entire wheat flour. The crumb of bread made from this flour is brown in color, and the loaf is not quite so light as that made from the more common white flour.

Rye flour is also used for bread but it is usually combined with wheat flour, because the gluten formed is not very elastic. Rye flour alone is used in making some specialty breads such as pumpernickel.

Flour can also be made from corn, oats, rice, potatoes, soybeans, lima beans, and buckwheat. But none of these flours contain gluten. So you must mix them with wheat flour to make a light loaf of bread.

In following a recipe, exact measurements are important, and flour is probably the trickiest of the ingredients to measure. If the flour is packed down, you may be able to get as much as 1½ cups into a one-cup measure. That's why recipes tell you to sift the flour before you measure it—except coarse whole-wheat flour, which will not go through an ordinary sifter. After the flour is sifted, dip it gently into a measuring cup. A cup that is level on top is ideal because you can run a knife over the top and get an exact measure.

Always use the kind of flour suggested in a recipe—hard wheat, soft wheat, or all purpose. Then there is less chance that you will have cakes that are tough, or bread that is heavy and poor in shape.

In making doughs, the cook may be puzzled to find that the recipe suggests only an approximate amount of flour; for example, the directions for making biscuits, say "enough milk to make a soft dough." Recipes can not be specific on these points when different types of flour vary so much. Strong flour absorb more liquid than weak flours, so it takes more water or milk to make them into a soft dough. When you make bread from a new lot of flour, it's best to measure the amount of flour you use and note how it acts. If you get good results, use the same measurements and methods as long as that lot of flour lasts. If the flour has dried out in the meantime, it will require somewhat more liquid to make a soft dough.

GOOD BOOKS—GOOD FRIENDS BOOK WEEK NOVEMBER 10 TO 16

Now is the time to give the children books

BOOK WEEK being celebrated November 10-16 provides a pleasant annual national festival which our community shares. In happy mood, it presents programs vital to private living and public welfare—a crusade for books and reading!

"It would be hard to find anyone who would declare that it is unnecessary for children to learn to read," says a Library Bulletin, "yet reading in itself is not the end we seek, but only a means to that end. The goal of all education is the enrichment of life, and a child's reading carefully guided will deepen and strengthen his future ability to make the most of himself and his opportunities."

"To love books so that they may be woven into the warp and woof of his life a child should have his own individual library, which grows year by year with his growth, yet which contains friends to whom he will return time and time again, secure in the knowledge of a happy companionship full of pleasant association."

Through twenty-two years recurring observances of BOOK WEEK have contributed to the quality and the quantity of books, to the facilities for their public circulation, to the growing army of men and women fitted and informed to advise and direct a course for "wider and wiser use of books."

While library service is growing rapidly it has been estimated that only one person in three has a good library near at hand. Of the 46,000,000 Americans without access to libraries, millions are obviously children! Small towns and rural areas suffer the greatest lack in this direction.

We spend ample time in planning what we shall put on and in our children's bodies, and little on what we shall put in their minds! They go to school, but that is for only five hours a day for approximately 185 days in the year. What of the years before they go to school, what of the hours and days each year in which they are not under instruction? Have we any deliberate plan to care for the mind's growth as we care for the body's?

Let us, then, during this BOOK WEEK, plan to have more books in the home, the school, the library—books to satisfy needs and to stimulate imagination, books for wholesome entertainment, friendly understanding and broadening education!

citizen to carry on its work for the men in our Army and Navy and their families, to provide nurses for our armed forces, to give prompt relief to the victims of disasters and to be ready to serve in any natural emergency which may arise. Every American should deem it a duty as well as a privilege to join his Red Cross this year.

Two county organization meetings were held last week, one at Quakertown, on Thursday, for Bucks and Montgomery counties, and the second on Friday, in West Chester, for the Roll Call leaders in Delaware and Chester counties. Those who attended these meetings were privileged to receive first-hand information concerning the value of American Red Cross aid to Britain from David K. E. Bruce, volunteer delegate and liaison officer between the American Red Cross and its London committee. Mr. Bruce said that the Red Cross was frequently forced to operate from air-raid shelters but stated that Britain was still unbowed and displayed high courage and optimism as to the final outcome of the war.

Ships bearing garments, medical supplies and surgical dressings from the American Red Cross are reaching England almost daily and these supplies are of inestimable value to bomb-raid victims. The week before last, 54 cases—more than five tons of garments and surgical dressings, made by the volunteers of the Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter, were shipped to England, aboard a British boat direct from the Port of Philadelphia. In the week just passed, 24 additional cases of such relief supplies were sent to Britain.

November 10th is Red Cross Sunday in churches throughout the length and breadth of the land. From nearly every pulpit an appeal will be made for parishioners to support their Red Cross and participate in its work by enrolling as members during the Roll Call.

PASSING WEEK WAS ONE OF THRILLS IN FOOTBALL HISTORY

MANY DIZZY INCIDENTS

Conference Race Sprouted Into A Million Different
Angles

By Jack Gill

Football squirmed out of a week that was highlighted with a steady continuity of dizzy incidents. Near riots ensued, a team fighting for the championship came back in a last period madhouse rush to score and almost go on to triumph, another aggregation supplied the story of the week in winning its first major game in two years from a supposedly big time eleven, a coach in sandlot ranks pulled his boys off the field in a disputed decision in an intersectional game and a near riot was caused by a holding incident that reputedly halted a touchdown drive.

The conference race has sprouted into a million different angles, but it seems safe to say that Morrisville appears on the march to the championship.

Bensalem dements the yearly hand that fate deals them. In the running and on the move toward a second touchdown in the final quarter that would tie them up with the Dogs, who previously had held a 13-0 lead, they still rave over alleged holding of Gene Ashton. Shaving down the score from 13-0 to 13-7 in a wild last quarter, they were steadily advancing toward their pay-off.

Pass after pass had hit its mark. Like the steady staccato of an army machine gun on the practice range at Fort Dix, Killian, nowadays dubbed "Heaven Hank," slung aerials into the waiting arms of Ashton and Colbert. Deep down in Morrisville territory Killian cuts loose once again. A Morrisville defense man was spied by fans and Coach Reimer holding Ashton.

Here is irony in all of its shining glory. One score and a tie could have meant the sectional scholastic title. An extra point afterwards might have meant smooth sailing from now until the finish. Ashton was kept out of the play and Morrisville's Beadle took the pass. The drive ends.

That is the conception of the play. Three officials run ball games. Merely mentioned here as a sidelight, it in no way detracts from the result. Morrisville wins and Bensalem loses.

At Bristol it rained hard all Saturday morning. A fire in the athletic quarters of Coach Tom Campion saw flames pour more water on the place Sunday morning as equipment smoldered.

Monday afternoon, however, it really poured, hailed and blew. This is the week's biggest story supplied by one touchdown in the final period. Langhorne, 6; Bristol, 0. After 12 years and with its weakest team in history, the fighting Redskins had hit the jackpot.

Often they had previously tried to do that trick with very good ensembles. Two years ago they came here unbeaten and unscored upon, only to drop a 20-0 verdict. Last year they were beaten by Bristol by a 60 to 0 count. Remember, that game was nothing more than a sham.

Mayhops Langhorne did also. Beaten this season by Morrisville, 47-0, and Mt. Holly, 42-6, they were so grossly underrated by Bristol that the ultimate verdict was only pushed onward by sheer disregard for their ability.

Dick Harlow, in a recent magazine article, based all of his success at Harvard on psychological attitude. This situation may help to clear the idea he was trying so hard to impress upon football fans.

Langhorne was beaten badly and often. Many of the boys on this year's team were members of the 1939 unit that had failed not only to score a win, but also a single point. They were truly the laughing stock of district football. Other high schools snickered disdainfully at them as they attended ball games around the circuit.

OLD MAN RIVER - - - By Jack Sords

HOPPE HAS BEEN A NATIONAL HEADLINER FOR ALMOST 35 YEARS

Last week, according to Coach Charlie Beck, the boys contracted a rejuvenated spirit. Noticing the changed attitude in Wednesday's practice scrimmage, the veteran leader was visibly impressed. "I feel sure that if you boys play against Bristol as you are playing now, you could beat them," he remarked.

That was a big statement then. What a laugh it would have been before Monday's dizzy upheaval.

But the boys were in earnest. They really meant it. They went into that game shouldering the old Bob Zupke axiom. The great collegiate mentor of Illinois has said often that a team that goes on the field with the feeling that it cannot be beaten usually comes through successfully.

Langhorne, tired of being drubbed, arose from the depths of district athletic obscurity to pull the greatest upset in history.

Bristol, expecting another one of those 60 to 0 breather games preceding next week's big fuss with Burlington, is still looking to Burlington.

And the fire that flamed in the Bensalem line ignited too late to do any good. Punk for three periods, it arose to inspired play only after a touchdown had perked it up. Had it started out that way, Morrisville's backs may have been stopped dead all day.

Newtown took an 18 to 0 lacing from an exceptionally strong Pemberton eleven.

The players of the week were "Heaven Hank" who almost busted the Bulldogs' bank; and Warren Gottwalds, who punted Bristol back on its heels often.

With election still sizzling and last week's scholastic football burlesque

WOMEN BOWLERS WIN OVER PHILA. GROUP

Bristol Women bowlers played a very interesting game against the Philadelphia stars, winning all four points. Nell Wilk, the outstanding woman bowler from Philadelphia was anchor woman on the defeated team, but still held the record for high score over all. Sara O'Boyle was high with 519 for the Bristol Bowlers.

In the Men's Major League, the Bristol Bowling Club defeated Burlington, putting themselves in first place. In spite of this victory, the Major League rolled the poorest match of the season, missing spare after spare, which showed nothing else but lack of practice.

George Bailey rolled a conspicuously poor game which he claimed was due to bad wood. Maybe the ladies will make a place for him in their league.

Carlen of the J. A. C.'s rolled the best games of the evening, having two games over 200 and a total points of 597.
